For the 179 PAs conducted through December 1990, the RTC claims it was able to save, on average, 6 percent of the projected cost of a liquidation, or about $1.6 billion.<sup>14</sup> (During the same period, 13. In December 1989, some private analysts projected that only a handful of then-operating thrifts could successfully continue their operations. Higher capital requirements, higher insurance premiums, greater restrictions on activities, and a stiffer qualified thrift lender test reduced the value of the thrift charter. See, for example, Mark Wohar, The Value of the Thrift Charter, Office of Thrift Supervision Journal (December 1989). <sup>14</sup>. This calculation is subject to some error because savings are based on the difference between the projected cost of a liquidation and the PA arranged. Figure 6.
